Threat to Kill Nixon?

That Lee Harvey Oswald, accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy, threatened to kill former Vice President Richard M. Nixon was hinted last week when a Presidential commission investigating the assassination again questioned Oswald's widow.

The commission summoned Marina Oswald from her home in a Dallas suburb, where she lives with her two small daughters. She had been questioned before last February.

Allen Dulles, acting as commission chairman in the absence of Chief Justice Earl Warren, said Mrs. Oswald had been recalled as a result

Nixon was in Dallas Feb. 21, a day before President Kennedy was slain by a sniper. It was reported that the commission asked Mrs. Oswald if she locked up her husband after he threatened to shoot Nixon.

Warren did an unprecedented thing for a U.S. chief justice last week when he went to a jail in Dallas to get added testimony from a prisoner—Jack Ruby, who is condemned to die for slaying Oswald.

Warren spent three hours with Ruby and also visited the building where the assassin's shots apparently were fired, the spot where Oswald allegedly slew a Dallas policeman just after the assassination and the theater where he was arrested.

It was understood that Ruby was asked again if he had known Oswald and if there was any tinge of conspiracy in his killing of Oswald. He repeatedly denied both. He also was said to have been asked his reasons for visiting Cuba in the 1950s.
